More about the London Green Map project:

The London Green Map presents a different picture of London, highlighting the diversity and creativity of our communities, and the ways they have found to make a green and healthy future a reality today.

The London Green Map project will also engage Londoners in a mapping process that is creative, inclusive and educational. Groups across Greater London will also be starting their green map on Saturday 5 June.

The London Green Map is also an interactive website that visitors can search by postcode or add their project to online.

If you are interested in finding out about local green mapping, please contact vinciane@london21.org.

Workshop on Mapping London's Alternative Economy

The workshop is organised by LETS Link London and will be an opportunity to put on the map and network LETS schemes, Time Banks and Credit Unions across Greater London.

Cafe: The community internet cafe will be open as usual and serves a range of fair trade products.

Getting there: The Waterloo Green and Living Space building are at 1 Coral Street, at the junction of Baylis Road and Waterloo Road, just South of Waterloo station.

Tube/rail: Waterloo

Buses: 1,4, 26, 59, 68, 168, 171, 172, 176, 188, 243

A London 21 Project: The London Green Map is a project of London 21 Sustainability Network. London 21 supports, promotes and networks community-based action for sustainability in Greater London (www.london21.org).

Saturday 5 June is also the opening day of London Sustainability Weeks 2004. The Weeks take place between 5 and 19 June, and celebrate the action of local people making their communities greener, healthier places to live. See www.londonsustainabilityweeks.org for a listing of the 200+ events.
